

Information for Military Service Members & Veterans

The Child Support Enforcement Division (CSE) recognizes that many parents who have a child support case with us are active duty military service members; are being called to active military duty; or are veterans. CSE joins those who thank you for your dedicated service to our country. We want to assist parents with their child support issues as they make the transition from civilian life to full-time military duty or leave active military service.

Attention: Military Reservists & National Guard - Are you being called to duty or planning to enlist?

We want parents to better understand how military duty can or may affect their child support case, specifically regarding Income Withholding; Modification; Medical Support; and Passport Requests.

If you have been called to active duty or planning to enlist, it is important that you:

- Call us on our dedicated military hotline (617)887-5050
- Email us at CSEVet@dor.state.ma.us
- Tell us your military branch and date of activation; and
- Give us your new address.

Income Withholding

If you pay child support and the payments are withheld directly from your paycheck, please contact us as soon as possible. We can transfer the income withholding from your civilian employer to the Department of Defense (DFAS) so that your child support will be deducted from your military pay. There may be some delay before the income withholding at DFAS goes into effect. To avoid any lapse in payments during this time, you must make payments on your own using our payment coupons  until you see the child support deducted from your military pay.

Modification

Military activation may mean a sizeable reduction in monthly income. The change in income may justify a change in the amount of the child support order. Only a court can modify the amount of your child support order; however DOR can help you ask the court for a change to the amount of your child support order. Remember -- even if your income is reduced due to military activation, you are still responsible for paying the current court order amount on time and in full. DOR will continue to use all available enforcement remedies to collect any past-due support.

Medical Support

If you are ordered to provide health insurance coverage for your children, your call to military duty means your existing insurance coverage will end. However, you may enroll your children in the military health care coverage

TRICARE. You must notify us if you will no longer be maintaining your existing health insurance plan, and we can then assist in enrolling your children in the military's TRICARE coverage.

Passport Requests

Your call to active military duty may require you to obtain a valid passport prior to deployment. The State Department will refuse to issue or renew passports to parents who owe $2,500 or more in past-due child support. If you owe $2,500 or more in past-due support, please contact us to discuss payment options so that you can obtain your passport.

Authorization for Release of Information

Our policy prevents us from discussing a child support case with anyone other than you or the other parent in the case without your permission. If you have been called to active military duty and want to designate someone else to speak with us on your behalf, you must provide a completed Authorization for Release of Information  to us. Once we have this form on file, we will be able to discuss your case with the individual you designate.

What to Remember About Active Duty and Child Support

- Let us know you've been called up to active military duty and give us your new address and/or employment status.
- If your child support is deducted from your paycheck, have your employer e-mail Employer Services csegen@dor.state.ma.us or call us at 800-332-2733 (local callers, 617-660-1234) to report your date of activation.
- If your income will be much lower while on active duty, contact us and we can help you ask the court to modify your child support order. Until your order is modified, you must continue to pay your current court order amount on time and in full.
- If your military deployment requires a passport and you owe $2,500 or more in past-due support, contact us immediately to discuss payment options so you can get your passport.
- If you want a relative, friend, or other person you trust to assist you with your child support case while you are on active duty, be sure to send us a Authorization for Release of Information  authorizing us to discuss your case with that person.
